Anesthesia:

In Veterinary medicine it is necessary to keep our patients under general anesthesia for their oral exam and dental prophy. Your pet will be anesthetized, intubated and maintained on gas anesthesia.

Monitoring:

Your pet will have important vitals monitored while under anesthesia by a Certified Veterinary Technician

Charting:

Your pet's teeth will be charted for missing or damaged teeth.

Oral Exam and probing:

Each tooth is examined for fractures, pockets and other abnormalities to determine if extractions are needed.

Ultrasonic Cleaning:

The teeth are cleaned using an ultra-sonic cleaner to remove accumulated tartar from the surface of the teeth and just below the gum-line. After cleaning the teeth are polished.

Extractions:

Throughout this process loose or damaged teeth are identified and are most often best removed while your pet is already under anesthesia. The veterinarian will determine which teeth will need extraction.

At Home Dental Care:

The Pet Owner is an Integral Part of the Team Home Care is the single most Important Procedure the owner can do to maintain oral health

If performed regularly, daily brushing will dramatically increase the interval between teeth cleaning appointments. Plaque is constantly being made and deposited in the mouth. Proper home care can keep plaque buildup under control. The goal of dental home care is to remove plaque from tooth surfaces and gingival sulci before it mineralizes into calculus, a process that occurs within days of a teeth cleaning. Success depends on the owner's ability to daily brush the teeth, as well as the dog or cat's acceptance of the process. True oral cleanliness can only be achieved through the mechanical action of toothbrush bristles above and below the gingiva.
